The beautiful National Botanic Garden of Wales is one of the foremost garden charities in the United Kingdom

The National Botanic Garden of Wales is a very special place.

The first botanic garden of the millennium opened in May 2000 and is busy blossoming into a beautiful, much-talked-about jewel in the crown of UK gardens.

Its centrepiece is the stunning Great Glasshouse, housing rare and endangered Mediterranean climate plants from around the world, like a huge Noah's Ark.

But there is more to this Garden than Lord Foster's stunning and unique dome – which, as well as being a true Modern Wonder of Wales, is also the largest single-span glasshouse on the planet.

The Garden is internationally recognised for its scientific research and conservation and led the project which saw Wales become the first country in the world to DNA barcode all its native flowering plants.

It is also helping in the battle against disease, and in the fight to save pollinators.

This research is ongoing and cannot be achieved without the help and support of our members.

In fact, members have a big stake in the future of the Garden as a whole, not just its scientific endeavours and its conserving of rare Welsh plants.

Which is why we need and seek your support so we can continue with this important work.

By becoming a member of the Garden, not only will you be supporting our charity and helping us to carry out essential research, but members can enjoy an extensive range of benefits:
